

A World of Love, Not Hate - Micheal Kwasi Ackumey

Oh rulers, let your hearts be wise,
And see the tears in children's eyes.
The bombs you drop, the wars you wage,
Have filled the world with fear and rage.

Yet mercy speaks in voices low,
A river soft, yet strong in flow.
Extend your hands, let hatred cease,
And sign your names in scrolls of peace.

For history writes of kings who fail,
Whose hearts were cold, whose greed prevailed.
But those who choose to love and give,
Shall build a world where all can live.