

Editorial

Welcome to the 2022 edition, Volume 6, of the Journal of Anti-corruption Law. This edition contains seven academic articles focusing on economic crimes during the Covid-19 pandemic.

- In his contribution Kenneth Fred Akena engages with the misuse of public funds and compares the situation in Uganda to other selected East African States.
- This is followed by the contribution of Julie Lugulu who focuses on corruption in Kenya during the Covid-19 pandemic.
- In his article Gerardo Centeno Garcia explores Mexico's special economic zones concerning anti-corruption.
- The article by Robert Muwanguzi and Hadijah Namyalo-Ganafa examines the dynamics of corruption during the COVID-19 procurement of healthcare in Uganda.
- Keith Tichaona Tashu and Msuthukazi Makiva in their article explore corruption in local government during the Covid-19 pandemic in Zimbabwe.
- Opal Sibanda, in her contribution, focused on advancing children's right to education in Zimbabwe.
- In his article Zakaria Tiberindwa discusses the preparedness of Uganda's anti-corruption agencies to counter corruption in Covid-19 cash transfers.

- In the final article, Coleta Wesso and Abraham Hamman present their research regarding the scourge of money laundering during the Covid-19 pandemic in South Africa