

UWC Participants

Gaireyah Fredericks
 Nokuzola Dyanti-Achi
 Margot Luyt
 Nolwazi Machi
 Sixolile Mbalo
 Siphosethu Phikelela
 Loraine Stander

UWC Coordinating Team

Antjie Krog (coordinator, translator Afrikaans)
 Nonzolo Titi (translator isiXhosa)
 Nkosinathi Sithole (translator isiZulu)
 Stacey Elias (psychotherapist)
 Jill Flusk (logistics and organisation)

Response

Dr Margie Orford is the author of the internationally acclaimed Clare Hart novels, which focus on the crimes of rape and femicide in South Africa. A Fulbright scholar, she is an honorary fellow at St Hugh's College, Oxford, and has written extensively on violence against women as part of her advocacy for women's rights to safety, creativity and free expression. She was the patron of Rape Crisis, the president of the free expression organization, PEN South Africa, and as member of PEN International's executive board, is a co-author of the PEN International Women's Manifesto [<https://pen-international.org/who-we-are/manifestos/the-pen-international-womens-manifesto>]. Her memoir, Jumping Ship, which addresses her own experiences of sexual violence will be published in 2021.

Funders

- Breytenbach Sentrum in Wellington under Theo Kemp supported the first workshop.
- University of the Western Cape: Duncan Brown supported the first workshop through the UWC project. This publication is made possible through A.W. Mellon funded project on 'Rethinking South African Literature(s)'
- Penn State University: Rosemary J. Jolly, through the Weiss Chair of the Humanities in Literature and Human Rights (supported the translations from indigenous languages as well as the Bodymapping workshop)